G.M.Engineering 1981 - 51ft - Traditional Stern Narrowbeam boat lying at Mercia Marina

Mathew Bolton is a traditional tug style boat ,built by GM Engineering in the Black Country M Engineering built many distinctive looking boats which are easily identified as from that builder. The distinctive and very practical long front end not only adds to the overall shape of the boat ,but also provides a useful under cover work area or just somewhere to sit, maybe even another berth under cover. From the stern there is very clean engine room housing a 2 cylinder Sabb and all services. Forward of the engine room is a bedroom with a fixed double with storage under, cupboard and half wardrobe. Off corridor bathroom with Thetford toilet, shower and sink in vanity unit. Galley with central isle with units either side. Comfortable forward saloon which leads out to the large well deck. Current owner has survey from 2009.
