Branson - Edwardian Launch Style 1992 - 60ft - Cruiser Stern Narrowbeam boat lying at Mercia Marina

Kingsway was built by Branson, who built a number of stylish narrowboats as well as widebeam cruisers and barges. Kingsway was designed along the lines of an Edwardian launch as can be seen from the profile of the bow and stern. Kingsway is priced to reflect the attention she needs to bring her back to the stylish boat she was. From the stern there is a lovely long stern deck covered by a large pram cover. From the glazed stern doors you enter the bedroom with a fixed double bed, wardrobe, under bed storage and dressing table. The bathroom is off the corridor with a large corner bath with shower fittings, sink in vanity unit and pumpout toilet. U shaped galley with 24v fridge and raised oven and grill. Large forward saloon opening out on to a large well deck area with seating either side. Recent new stern gear fitted. Survey report 2019. Blacked + anodes 2019.

Printed on 12th December 2019
